This is a hands on (or imagination on, if you will) workshop. We will discuss the aspects of storytelling, the roll you, the story and listener all play, and how you can use them to engage your listeners. We will experiment with different types of stories and styles of storytelling. You will come away with more confidence in your skills and more tools to use with your listeners.

Objectives:

- Enchant your listeners with the love of literacy through other means than reading from the book
- Enhance senses—sight, sound, smell, taste, touch—to create more connections for your listeners
- Discover feedback signs from your listeners so you can adapt the stories accordingly

Wise Storyteller = right story at the right time and with many stories in the repertoire

This workshop could be a webinar, but in person is always better.

I am willing to travel. Standard fees apply.

There is a discount for multiple sessions.

Holly Robison is a storyteller, teacher, presenter, mentor, and—first and foremost—a wife and mother. She has spent over 16 years lifting audiences, individuals, workshop attendees through story, song and interactive telling. Since her storytelling beginnings while earning her Theater degree from Brigham Young University, Holly has inspired audiences all of the world from Sydney Australia and Edmonton Canada to Missouri and the Northwest giving workshops and performances. Holly has the skills and charisma to take any audience on a magical journey.
